

Unity and Diversity
Student panel: On the Elections

Jaci Sutton

11 Nov 2004

Can the exuberant amount of money spent on political campaigns be justified? With topical dialogue focusing on health care reform, the cost of warfare, and other financial and economic issues, we cannot ignore the excessive amounts currently being spent on political campaigns. We must ask ourselves whether such spending can be morally and ethically justified, in light of the current needs of our state, country, and world.