WHY STUDY ANTHROPOLOGY?
Anthropology provides a strong foundation for interacting with diverse human cultures — an important ingredient for living successfully in a modern, rapidly globalizing society. Anthropology is the comparative study of people and their life-ways across the full temporal and spatial range of human experience. Anthropology is divided into four subfields: archaeology, cultural anthropology, physical anthropology and linguistics. All students will have an opportunity to work on archaeological excavations or in the archaeology laboratory, as well as carry out individual research projects in any of the four subfields.
